

Public Comment from Ken MacAleese:

My name is Ken MacAleese, and I am a behavior analyst in Nevada. While I will be unable to attend the insurance subcommittee meeting in January, I do have a wealth of information around insurance, funding, and trends nationally and regionally. This committee may be the most important current committee that exists. Issues with funding are likely the biggest and most significant threat to continued service in Nevada. We are currently receiving significant downward pricing pressure that will create dramatic issues with treatment over time.

Changes in ACA (which are likely in the next few years) are another threat, but it is unlikely we can do much to influence outside of sending letters, etc.

If there are ideas or considerations the committee is considering, I would be happy to exchange information around this subject matter with committee chairs or boards if they would like to email or call.
